Commentary

The portfolio's net return for the month of July was +2.1%.<sup>2</sup> The portfolio's long investments added +3.7% to performance for the month while the short portfolio detracted -1.6%. Pleasingly the portfolio made positive returns in all regions.

The largest contributors were Schlumberger (SLB) and CME. SLB reported strong results as the company continues to benefit from growing international capex for oil exploration and production projects. In the near-term, the stock was also influenced by the oil price which was up 16% during July. CME's second quarter results were also encouraging, with revenue growth of 10% translating to EPS growth of nearly 20% due to the combination of growing volumes, pricing benefits and revenue mix shift towards higher revenue contracts.

During the month, we made some changes to the portfolio. We initiated a position in META after taking advantage of temporary weakness following the large NASDAQ rebalance. We have been following META's evolution and we like that the business is now looking to drive revenue growth acceleration after a period focused on cost cutting and investment. We were pleased to see this reflected in the most recent quarterly results.

In addition, we slightly reduced our holdings in exchanges CME and DB1 as well as AMZN, although these remain high-conviction holdings for the fund.

The largest detractor was the short portfolio, reducing monthly returns by -1.6%. Many of the existing shorts have not worked well and we have cut some and reduced others. As markets have continued to rally, we have started to slowly grow short exposure in the technology sector where we believe there are a range of attractive short opportunities.

Buy-back: Approximately 3.3 million VG1 shares were bought at an average price of $1.70 during July.

FY23 result: VG1 expects to release its FY23 result on Tuesday, 15 August.
